Apart from these considerations, the agreements seem to cover most of the three countries' initial demands, and they amount to virtual U.S. membership of the Baghdad Pact, can fact, specify Communist aggression when it declares that the U.S. Government regards the preservation of the independence and integrity of the three countries as "vital to its national interest and to world peace."

The one immediate advantage of the agreements come at a time when Iraq, one of the first signatories to the Baghdad Pact, can be considered virtually out of the alliance. This development, although it may not greatly affect the Pact, has created an understandable region of insecurity among the solution and most warmly to Mr.

AlloNON'S Dance Rhap—Sady, "Dalla," dedicated to Georg Singer and the Kol Yisrael Orchestra, is descriptive music (the Dance Fee-tival) that bit of postoral brass and drums hammering in away at ostivatily that bit of postoral brass and drums hammering in away at ostivatily the bear which all to get the same which all to get the same like a welcome breeze works. The one immediate advantage of the agreements will no doubt be their probable impact on the present tension between Teheran and Moscow. The Iranian Government has lately been facting increasing Soviet pressure which often amounted to open threat.

Of significance, too, is the fact that the agreements come at a time when Iraq, one of the first signatories to the Baghdad Pact, can be considered virtually out of the alliance. This development, although it may not greatly affect the Pact, has created an understandable feeling of insecurity among the other members. The bilateral agreements signed on Thursday will go a long way to dispel this feeling.

Jacoby seems to be at his best when working with borrowed material. As such, the second and third part of his Partita are well constructed and balanced. As to the work as a whole, there seems to be a lack of logical connection and a certain difference of style between the two mediums of expression.

The consolation of the evening was Dvorak's beautiful string screnade. This is music full of innocence and purity. In Mr. Taube's animated and inspired rendering these elements were given their full expression.

A LTHOUGH a string ensure possible proceeds from the country. This programme, designed to produce the marks have been sucked in, does singly the country. This programme takes in Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso. In spite of Mr. Komfort's beautiful tone and fluent rendering, the general sound effect was somewhat harsh and cold.

The disappointing atmosphere of the evening continued with Ronith Amir's rendering of Bach's piano Concerto in D minor. Those who opposed Glenn Gould's interpretation of Bach as too personal and "romantic," did not find a favourable substitute in R. Amir's very indifferent and impersonal rendering. Her hard touch and disregard for basic construction values of Baroque music made her interpretation questionable.
